Building a more emergency-resilient community starts with preparedness, connection, and looking out for one another. Neighbourhood connections are especially important for supporting people who may need extra assistance, including seniors, people with reduced mobility, those living with health challenges, and vulnerably housed individuals.

Be prepared for wildfire season this year with the right information: LetsTalk.Kamloops.ca/FireSmart

DID YOU KNOW?

One of the most effective things residents can do to be emergency resilient is to apply FireSmart principles to their property. Simple actions such as clearing dry vegetation, keeping roofs and gutters free of debris, creating defensible space around homes, and choosing fire-resistant landscaping can help reduce wildfire risk.

Not every tree near your property belongs to you. Some trees located on boulevards, rights-of-way, or other City-owned land are maintained by the City, while others may be the property owner's responsibility. Municipal utilities, like water, sewer, and garbage services, are important systems that everyone in the City uses every day. Residents can help keep these systems working well by using them properly, such as only flushing toilet paper, keeping fats and oils out of drains, and putting the right items in the garbage or recycling. Do your part!

Learn more about utilities and your responsibilities as a property owner at: LetsTalk.Kamloops.ca/LetsLearn

Riverside Park is Kamloops' only designated river swimming area, and the safest time to swim is when lifeguards are on duty. Swimming in rivers is dangerous due to fast currents, drop-offs, waves, rapids, underwater obstacles, and debris.

Local governments work best when residents understand who does what, how decisions are made, and where to bring questions or concerns. A strong local government depends on a clear distinction between governance and administration. Understanding this separation helps residents know where to bring questions, concerns, and ideas.

Kamloops is home to a vibrant mix of pets, people, and urban wildlife. From dogs and cats to backyard hens—and the deer, coyotes, and birds that share our neighbourhoods—responsible stewardship helps keep our community safe, healthy, and respectful of the natural environment.

NOTES

Each year, legislation requires the City to develop a balanced budget and five-year financial plan to guide essential programs and services—from clean drinking water and waste management to emergency first response.

If you want to better understand how that budget comes together, check out the Finance, Budget, and Taxes section at: LetsTalk.Kamloops.ca/LetsLearn

DID YOU KNOW?

The City of Kamloops only determines and receives the municipal portion of property taxes. Over a third of property taxes are set by and collected for other authorities, including School District No. 73, the Thompson-Nicola Regional District, the Thompson Regional Hospital District, and the BC Assessment Authority.
